Heraldic Coat of Arms Gifts

THE ART OF HERALDRY was developed to its highest form during the Crusades (1096-1270). The knights who rode forth to battle in those days were encased in heavy armor and in order to identify themselves, they decorated their shields with personal devices or insignia. The term "coat of arms" derives from the practice of displaying such insignia on the surcoat worn over a suit of armor.

IN THE BEGINNING, only those who fought were allowed to wear such devices. However, when artillery made armor obsolete, shields lost their military significance and coats of arms became hereditary family symbols, handed down with pride from generation to generation.

IN TODAY'S CHANGING WORLD, the display of one's coat of arms indicates a family stability reaching back thru the centuries, and interest in heraldry is becoming increasingly widespread!
